Farm News

Farmers Reminded of New Weevil Control Recommendation

Appomattox farmers are reminded that it's time to apply the granulated form of heptachlor to control the alfalfa weevil.

It should be applied during the last week of February or during the first half of March. The granulated form is especially recommended where the weevil is known to be a problem, or where spray equipment is not easily available for applying the heptachlor spray later in the season.

Only one treatment of the granulated form is necessary. It can be applied with fertilizer-lime spreaders, or with hand-operated cyclone type seeders where only small plots of alfalfa are involved. Use from 10 to 60 pounds of the 2½% granulated heptachlor per acre.

The newly recommended control has several advantages over the spray treatment. It is applied before growth of alfalfa and/or weeds start, thus eliminating toxic residue on the harvested crop and any possibility of toxic poisoning to honeybees. It's applied when equipment and labor are not tied up with other farm chores and when the alfalfa will not be damaged under the wheels of heavy equipment. It can be applied with equipment which is usually already on the farm. It gives reasonably effective control also for spittlebug, clover root curculio, and clover root borer.

The main disadvantage is the high cost of the insecticide. It will probably cost around $5.50 per acre for the one treatment of granulated heptachlor.

Virus Cuts Ladino Yields

Alfalfa mosals and bean yellow mosaic-virus infections that often slice ladino clover forage yields by one-fourth to one-half, have equally devasting results in flowering and seed production of the crop.

USDA scientists have found that these two diseases reduce flowering by 20 to 44%, and seed production by 20 to 54%.

Tests showed only slight germination difference between seeds of virus-infected and healthy plants. It was found that transmission of these two viruses occur rarely, if at all, through ladino clover seeds.

These findings on seed yield have stimulated the search for resistant ladinos. One method of testing present varieties for resistance is to inoculate ladino seedlings with the alfalfa and bean yellow mosaic viruses. In that way scientists can determine susceptibility in only 4 to 6 weeks from the time the seed is planted.

Until resistant varieties are available, growers should avoid planting ladino clover near alfalfa, red clover, and other legumes. Viruses are often spread from field to field by aphids and other insect carriers.

Alfalfa Acreage Up in Virginia

Alfalfa acreage is continuing its increase in Virginia — a new high acreage crop will produce a big crop or is as resistant to drought as grown on suitable soil.

Acreage last year reached 200,000 acres, an increase of 24,000 acres over the preceding year.

Here in Appomattox County spring seedings can be made at any time this month.

If you seed alfalfa this spring, be sure you choose a deep, well-drained soil, test the soil for the need for plenty of fertilizer when seeding, and prepare a good planting bed.

HIGHWAY DEPT. MOVES TO REPAIR RECENT ROAD DAM

The State Highway Department said today maintenance operations will be continued on a spot repair basis until roads which have been badly damaged by recent rains have been put "in reasonably satisfactory condition."

"Sections of primary roads covered by many miles of both untreated and surface-treated secondary roads are showing failures in various degrees," S. V. Munsey, the State Highway Department's maintenance engineer, said. In a letter to district and residency engineers, Munsey said special emphasis is to be put on widening school bus routes, and that all to the economy of any section in the northern and western sections of the state, where the frost is still in progress, he asked that strenuous patrols be maintained to relocate trouble spots and that emergency repairs promptly made on school bus routes showing deterioration, escort trucks should be provided to make repairs and furnish any needed assistance.

Full use will be made of convict labor, Mcnsey said, to keep ditches and drains open.

Several weeks ago, in a similar highway conditions through the state, engineers said roads in some sections were beginning to break up, and a quick thaw could be disastrous. Since that time, the road situation has been made worse by heavy rains, snow and zero or near-zero temperatures. Load limits on many secondary and some primary roads have been reduced in an effort to protect surfaces.

Engineers said it will be some time before a full estimate can be made of damage to highways can be made. Indications are that road repairs this winter might be the most extensive in several years.

About The Home

By Frances Dell

We are told that men are taking more interest in home furnishings than ever before. This is said to account for many of the new trends in furniture and fabrics used in decorating the home. Seems the men demand more service and less fancy trim. The new functional type furniture that has several different uses is a perfect example of what men like to find in household and office furniture.

Some sound advice from a male decorator is to keep two things in mind if you are thinking of buying furniture: "Buy good merchandise, and plan on what to buy with the money that is available." If the money you have allotted for furniture will not completely furnish your house, buy just the necessary pieces of good quality furniture, and wait until you can afford the other pieces. In the long run you will be better satisfied with what you have. You won't be faced with the problem of replacing new pieces or repairing what you have already.

The two most popular woods on the market today are birch and walnut. Wrought iron furniture is being replaced by the woods, although the trend is still in the contemporary style.

The section of the country you are living in has great bearing on the kind of furniture you choose. For example, in South Florida and California, modern and rattan is used extensively; in the deep southern states the traditional is still the favorite; the New England states favor the colonial type.

Early American, so popular a few years back in all sections of the country, seems to have fallen from favor. The fine old pieces will always be considered top choice by people who appreciate fine furniture, it was the over-doing copies that caused Early American furniture to bite the dust.

Another bit of important advice—never go in for fad type furniture. This rule applies to your choice of personal adornment as well as clothes. However, because usually furniture represents a larger investment of dollars, it is more important to keep this in mind. Always ask yourself how a certain piece of furniture will look ten years from the time you are buying it.

OF INTEREST TO VETERANS

When a disabled veteran dies he frequently has accumulated little and he often leaves his family to pass through a period of adjustment short of funds to meet even the most modest of living requirements. The survivors of deceased veterans can speed up consideration of their applications for compensation or pension if when filing their claims they will follow the four suggestions listed below:

1. If the veteran's death certificate is indefinite as to the cause of death, a certificate should be obtained from the attending physician showing his dates of treatment and cause of death. If the veteran had been suffering from service connected disabilities which helped bring about his death, it is very important that the physician include these disabilities as secondary causes of death. A completely prepared death certificate could mean to the widow the difference between a pension of $90.00 monthly, and indemnity compensation at a minimum of $122.00 a month.

2. A widow should be prepared to furnish the date and place of her marriage to the veteran. If she or the veteran had been previously married she should bring along. If possible, death or divorce records to show dissolution of such marriage or marriages.

3. All birth or baptismal certificates of minor children should be furnished. If a child had been adopted, a copy of the court order should be provided.

4. If dependent parents are filing claims, they should be ready with a birth or baptismal certificate of the deceased, showing the names of both parents.

Mrs. Mann Announces Appeal For Sale of Easter Seals Here

The 1958 Easter Seal campaign of the Virginia Society for Crippled Children and Adults will begin on March 6, it was announced today by Mrs. Hazel R. Mann, acting president of the Appomattox Chapter of the Society. The drive will continue for a month, through Easter Sunday.

No quota has been set. This program is one of true voluntary giving. For this reason, a quota has not been set for the campaign. It is felt that the work being carried on by the organization is deserving of public support and the local chapter is confident that with its record of service to the handicapped, it will receive even greater response to its appeal than last year.

The Easter Seal Society provided services to 3,891 children and 1,554 adu'ts last year, a total of 5,445 handicapped persons served.

These services were rendered through the clinics, treatment centers, and other facilities supported by Easter Seal funds.

Persons with almost every type of handicap are assisted by the society, including polio, cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis, epilepsy, arthritis, encephalitis, nephritis, rheumatic fever, and children with speech and hearing deficiencies.

The Easter Seal Society was organized for the purpose of helping children with all types of crippling defects, and has always taken pride in the fact that it has been able to provide assistance when other groups were unable beenuse of organizational policy or restrictions. The view is taken that many a person is crippled to a much greater extent who is suffering from such a crippling condition as epilepsy than others with strictly orthanaedic difficulties.

The Virginia Society for Crippled Children and Adults is an affiliate unit of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, which is at the present time carrying out an accelerated program of research into the causes and treatment, as well as the prevention, of crippling. Ninety per cent of the funds raised during the Easter Seal campaign remain in Virginia, with only ten per cent going to the national program of research and education.

Easter Seals will be mailed to residents of the area next week-end. Any one who fails to receive an Easter Seal letter may send a contribution to "Crippled Children" in care of the local postmaster.

THE SNOW SEASON

By Danny Herrcall

Some people say that "winter is the worst time of the year," Because it's so rainy, snowy, and cold, and sometimes not even clear.
But it really isn't that way, for children, that is.
When it snows we'll be over at the hill and you'll hear a happy whiz!
But then one day it melts away, but was fun when it was here.
Then we wonder why is the melting of the snow so queer.
